

To whom it may concern,

There was always something which I've admired and got inspired by whenever I see a product or a business that started within our community and over time became a global sensation.

Reality that Nordeus can tell such a story is a reason why I'm applying for this position now as I did in the past. Of course, not the only reason but the biggest one for sure.

This wouldn't be my first time walking into gaming industry since I do have experience gained at Sperasoft during their internship program. Even though I've spent the past year working in a complete different niche of software development I knew that one day I would like to go back to making games. There is a special feeling to it when you remember how excited you were to play a new game as a kid and now you come back full circle to deliver that same experience to new generations. Maybe this would be that moment.

Joe Strummer once said "Future is unwritten" – So I look forward to hearing a positive feedback from you, if not now than maybe sometime in the future.

Best regards,
